Columbia College Boys Practising. A careful canvass of athletic organizations relative to the tug-of-war discloses the fact at the Fourteenth Street Theatre next Monday, the most intelligent and far-sighted of the athletes are strenuously opposed to it because of its injurious effects. They say that almost without exception a weakened physique follows. The exception is in the case of an unusually powerful man of phlegmatic temperament, who will not exert himself to the utmost. Yet even he, they affirm, is rendered unfit for other forms of athletics. His spine is stiffened and he becomes heavy and sluggish in movement. The boating men say they never permit one of their oarsmen to engage in the tug-of-war. These brainy ath letes declare it is high time the tug-of-war question was brought up prominently by the athletic clubs and its evils pointed out and discussed. If this were done it would doubtless lead to the tug-of-war being abolished.

Jack Dempsey is an inveterate "guyer," in he language of the "perfesh." He will assume the austerity and earnestness of a dergyman while "swelling the head" of a greenhorn. The stranger is impressed by the Nonpareil's serious air, and nine times out of ten fails to "tumble untess his wits are quickened by the audible grins of chance bystanders who know Jack's penchant for "stringing" the confiding. By the way, Jack has a horse named Dan.

When questioned about Mike Daly's sweeping challenge published in The Eventor World, Jack McAuliffe said: "Those fellows are merely trying to get a lot of free advertising. I am perfectly willing to meet them all for a $1,000 stake it a decent purse will also be presented to the winner. I should be delighted to have a go with Daly, Meyer or any light-weight in the world, only I want to make a little money to pay me for my trouble. I should think the California Athletic Club would be willing to offer a purse, and I would accept a chance to fight these fellows there with alacrity."

McAnliffe and Billy Madden, by the way, are fairly launched as dramatic stars. This week they pummel each other scientifically on the stage of a Hoboken theatre, and next week they will delight lovers of clever boxing at Troy. Jack offers $50 to any light-weight who will stand before him for four rounds without being knocked off his pins.

John J. Gorman, of the Star Athletic Club, and weighing only 126 pounds, deserves much credit for the brilliant way in which he won the light-weight medal last night at the Brighton Athletic Club tournament. He had to white three men. And he trounced them well. The decision in the bantam class should have gone to James Rose, of the Allerton Athletic Club, instead of to J. Barnett, of the Atlantic. Rose had much the best of the four rounds. Sam Freuth, who won the feather-weight, and who is a superb cross-country and long-distance runner on the cinder path, proved that his running has given him staying power that can be relied upon. Jack Skelly was, in the opinion of everybody, the better man of the two, but he lost on account of a foolish desire to "show off." He played with Frenth and the judges served him just right. Jacob Pitz, who won the middle-weight, is the young man who gave Pat Cahill, the present middle-weight champion, such a good fight a short time ago. Pitz weighs but 140 pounds, but he can train into the light-weight class. proved the proved the proved the proved the proved the proved the provent the William Jackson, the famous English swim-mer, and all-round athlete, will enter Billy O'Brien's waiking match.

The Wyanoke Boat Club intends sending an eight, six and four to take in the inauguration ceremonies April 30.

If determination and faithful work have anything to do with the making of a good orew, the Columbia College boys certainly should feel hopeful. The Columbias are on the Harlem during practice hours, rain or shine.

It is more than probable that J. Dongherty, of Philadelphia, and W. Clark, of Brooklyn, who fought such a game fight last Sunday, will be matched again shortly. The ending of the re-cent fight, it will be remembered, was very un-satisfactory, Clark winning on a foul.

The Acorn Athletic Association, of South Brooklyn, numbers among its members F. L. Lambrecht, the champion hammer thrower; John Taylor, the clever all-round athlete; F. Olsen, the sculler; J. Nolan, light-weight boxer, and M. H. Cuming, "who can with ease lift the 75-pound dumb-bell," to use the language of an admirer. And, by the way, the sconer Mr. Cuming stops lifting heavy-weight dumb-bells the better it will be for his health. Lifting heavy weights is not the way to take the language of an agood way to injure oneself.

MUMOROUS REFLECTIONS MADE BY THE OARSMEN NOT PERMITTED TO ENGAGE IN CHARLES STOWS "AN IRON CREED" TO RE PRODUCED MONDAY.

> Rehearding "La Mexicana" at the Casino -The Actors' Fund Benefit-Advices to Sol Berliner-Haddon Chambers Said to Be Writing Another Play for the Madison Square Theatre.

Charles Stow's new five-act "drama of tocalled "An Iron Creed," to be produced will be brought forward with an excellent purpose in view, and if Mr. Stow's work be as good as this purpose he ought to have an enduring "An Iron Creed" he intends to do the Hebrew dramatic justice, presenting him as a worthy American citizen and, in fact, making him the hero of his play. The character of David Delmont, the banker, ought to be interesting, while in that of Dr. Stirnlaw, a rabbi, there is also scope for good work. Mr. Stow will also, in a mild inoffensive way, teach a lesson to those who talk of redeeming the Promised Land and building up thereon a New Jerusalem. Here is what Mr. David Delmont says on the subject: "Gaze not with vain longsays on the subject: "Gaze not with vain longings from Nebo's heights upon a kingdom of Mayor Grant in the last campaign is pretty you can never reach. This home of freedom is generally known, and it is believed that he is our promised land. and here, the New Jerusaings from Nebo's heights upon a kingdom our promised land, and here, the New Jerusalem, in which to erect a living temple, far more glorious and enduring than even that of s clomon-one founded on the eternal rock of patriousm and good actions. Hither let it be our aim to gather all our suffering, persecuted our aim to gather all our suffering, persecuted brethren from out the house of the Old World's despotic bondage into a land flowing with the suiritual milk and honey of toleration, enlightened progress and universal protection." In the cast will be J. F. Brien, Herbert A. Carr, Henry Lynn, Stephen R. Barry, H. F. Stone, W. H. Collings, Atkins Laurence, Frances Livingston, Marie Cross, Kate Foley, Mary Wade Hamilton, Rachel Rinard, Louise Halton, Florence Bayard and Mabel Laurence.

Sol. Berliner is getting badly rattled at comments upon his "Noble Son" speculation. There is pathos mingled with amusement in this rattlement. Pluck Mr. Berliner, pluck is the thing. Because "A Noble Son" began unfortunately, there is no reason why it should end in that way. Rehearsals of "La Mexicana," the new comic opera, to follow "Nadly" at the Casino, began yesterday.

The new play to be produced by Donnelly and Girard in Chicago was written by Paul Potter, and called "The Directory." All the characters in the play are named John Smith with the exception of Mr. Rolling Stone and Fifne, a part to be played by Miss Alice Harrison. The John Smith complications are said to be very funny.

Miss Clars Morris will be in Brooklyn April 15, and then goes to the Grand Opers-House in this city, where her season will end. Mr. Frederic de Belleville, all reports to the contray notwithstanding, leaves immediately for Europe, going to Belgium to visit his father. De Belleville says he is tired of playing villains. He wants to be something nice, and gain the sympathy of his sudience.

Mr. Haddon Chambers, the writer of the suc-cessful play, "Captain Swift," has, it is said, been commissioned by Manager A. M. Palmer to write another play for the Madison Square Theatre. The success of "Captain Swift" has been remarkable.

Here is a queer letter, dated from Pittsburg, and received by W. J. Florence:

W. J. Florence.

DEAR SIR: I met you on Fifth avenue yesterday and would have known you among a thousand, altho I have not seen you for Thirty-two or three years. wards. Mr. Ellerton could not say how long to stept. He remembered hearing a confused kind of conversation coming to him in his dreams, and, presently, teeling something touch him, he opened his eyes.

He saw two men in the cabin, and one of them had a revolver in his hand.

At first he thought he was still dreaming, then the reality came suddenly to him. He recogn red the man with the revolver. Leaping up from his berth he exclaimed, "Ned Donovan".

The mon with the revolver, a hig, determined looking fellow of about forty, with a bushy black heard and sharge, overhanging eyebrows, nodd at his head and laughed.

"Yes, Mr. Ellertou," he said, "it's me, right enough. You dishuft expect to have the pleasaire of my company, did you?"

In a moment the tull meaning of the situation burst upon the detective. He had been trapped. He was alone and detenseless on

ing; "there is another person who is anxious to have evidence that will make me a free woman. Some one with plenty of money. I will call on you again to-morrow morning. Good evening." "It's a rum case," said Mr. Ellerton to his wife, as he explained to that good lady the reason he was so late home to dress," but "It's a rum case," said Mr. Ellerton to his wife, as he explained to that good lady the reason he was so late home to dress, "but "It's a rum case," said Mr. Ellerton to his wife, as he explained to that good lady the reason he was so late home to dress, "but "It's a rum case," said Mr. Ellerton to his wife, as he explained to that good lady the reason he was so late home to dress, "but "In in London Mr. Ellerton showed the photograph right and left, but comia find no one who recognized it, nor could be any where flad among the Morris as who were dis overwhich through the "Pest-tiffice Unrectory" may one to answer the description of dis over able through the "Post-Office Office tory" may one to answer the description of the missing man. One morning about a fortnight after he had taken the affair up, the young bady cailed One morning about a fortnight after he had taken the effair un, the young lady called upon him in a state of great agitation. "We have a clue." "he exclaimed; "we must follow it up quickly. Can you leave with me for Havre to mpilt?" "Why for Havre." "Why for Havre." "By bushand if there. The gentleman with the clue this tolegram." The detective took in the telegram and read it. It was as follows: "Heleve Morrison is here on beard yeach twith young English lady said to be his wife. Saw him being rowed from shore it oday." "Tray come with me," ureed the agitated lady. "It is most important that you should star how. But we one should be the wing and mediant of the stitute of the standard of the sta
